Only a Few Seats Remain for WICT's Executive Development Series: Leading with Power and Authenticity

Leading with Power and Authenticity October 25-27, 2017 Rancho Santa Fe, CA

As leaders take on roles of greater influence within their organizations, authenticity and the ability to inspire trust among peers and followers is critical to success. These traits build cooperation and foster an environment of both support and challenge, helping to create a healthy organization.

Over this two-and-a-half day program, participants learn and practice strategies to build relationships in business, to manage differences among peers, and increase their organizational power so they can lead with vision and clarity. Through lecture, group exercises, peer feedback, and reflection, participants increase self-awareness of their priorities and unique abilities. On the final day, participants bring all elements together as they develop a tailored action plan.

Learn more about the facilitators for Leading with Power and Authenticity, Elaine Yarbrough and Lindsay Burr Singla.

A very limited number of seats remain available. We encourage you to register today to secure your spot in Leading with Power and Authenticity.

Nominations Now Being Accepted for WICT's Highest Honors, Including New Category for Technology or Supplier Companies

Nominations are now being accepted for WICT's most esteemed awards, the Woman of the Year and Woman to Watch. New this year is a Woman to Watch category which will recognize a woman who works for an industry supplier or technology company, in addition to the honors already presented to a Woman to Watch from an operator and a programmer. The awards will be presented at the Touchstones Luncheon, September 25, in New York during the 2017 WICT Leadership Conference.

You will find additional information on our website, including the criteria for each award, lists of past honorees and tips for writing a strong nomination. The deadline for submitting nominations is Friday, June 16, 2017, at 5:00 pm (Eastern).

Tech It Out Programs Help Members Keep Pace with Innovation

Technology has a direct impact on everyone in cable media, from front line employees to the C-suite. WICT's Tech It Out Initiative was launched in 2008 with a goal to create strong women leaders in technology, while also raising awareness about the vast opportunities for women in cable technology.

Local chapters are a critical part of fulfilling WICT's mission. They provide a platform that unites members and non-members, men and women alike, in educational programs that provide content relevant to today's business needs.

Throughout the network, WICT chapters have embraced Tech It Out as a strategy for equipping members with the knowledge they need to take on leadership roles.

Earlier this month, the WICT Midwest Chapter hosted a Tech It Out program at World Wide Technology outside St. Louis. The lively and interactive panel discussion brought attendees up to speed on the latest developments in OTT competition, cloud DVR services and other influences at work in today's marketplace.

Members are better contributors when they understand their environment and the external forces that affect their companies' operations. Together, WICT and its chapters work to ensure that members have access to expertise on the latest trends and developments that drive the media industry.

Make sure to check out the upcoming Tech It Out events listed below. Chapters add new programs all the time, so visit our web calendar often for additional dates and locations.

Congratulations to Graduates of BMLI Classes 34 & 35

WICT is pleased to announce that BMLI Classes 34 and 35 have completed their training and officially graduated from the program during their final sessions earlier this month.

Designed to elevate women leaders, the Betsy Magness Leadership Institute (BMLI) is recognized as the premier leadership development program for the cable and telecommunications industry. Those selected to participate take part in a yearlong educational journey that provides them with skills assessments, professional development, and industry involvement. BMLI fellows emerge with a committed passion to share what they have learned with their teams, their companies, and the industry as a whole.

Please join us in congratulating these outstanding women leaders! Click here to view photos and bios of Class 34 participants, and click here to view Class 35.

Meet Jin Zhou, First Recipient of the Nomi M. Bergman Fellowship

Jin Zhou

WICT recently announced Jin Zhou, Staff QA Engineer, ARRIS, as the inaugural recipient of the Nomi M. Bergman Fellowship.

Designed to support career development for high potential women working for technology suppliers, the Nomi M. Bergman Fellowship enables recipients to experience the strength of WICT's robust educational programs and strong professional network. The fellowship is a one-year award that includes WICT membership and a fully funded scholarship to the WICT Leadership Conference and other select WICT programs, to include travel stipends. The fellowship will be underwritten by WICT's Leadership Endowment Fund, which was established in 1989 in a measure to provide WICT to give back to the industry in meaningful ways.

Named in honor of one of the cable industry's most influential technology professionals, Ms. Bergman has been actively involved with WICT, CableLabs, NCTA, and SCTE. She was recognized by WICT and SCTE with the Women in Technology Award in 2004. The Fellowship was announced in Philadelphia during WICT's Tech It Out Conference, held in conjunction with SCTE/ISBE's 2016 Cable-Tec Expo®.

Meet Jin Zhou

Jin has been an activist member of WICT and the Greater Philadelphia Chapter since 2012, and is currently a Staff QA Engineer with ARRIS. Together with her colleagues, she qualifies and certifies products for hardware industry standards. Her job also covers root-cause analysis of field issues, which require knowledge across hardware, software, and operations.

Jin started her career in the cable industry in 1998 when she joined General Instrument as a headend software engineer. In 2009, she joined Comcast's TQM team, and moved to ARRIS in early 2017.

Jin holds a Bachelor's Degree in Electrical Engineering from Shanghai University in China as well as a Master's Degree in Electrical Engineering from the New Jersey Institute of Technology. She has also received Project Management credit from Penn State University.

The Cable Center, AMP10x Announce MediaAMP @ TCC, A Workspace for Creators

The Cable Center announced its new co-working space, MediaAMP @TCC, which opened March 1 in partnership with AMP10x. The Cable Center's CEO, Jana Henthorn, and AMP10x CEO, Maria Popo, formerly of Ubee, together with their teams have designed a highly interactive and innovative experience.

Adjacent to the University of Denver, MediaAMP @TCC is a community of creators supported by technologists within an environment of freelancers, start-ups and corporations. Imagine a broadcast executive, a corporate engineer and an entrepreneur collaborating to reshape the future of digital media and technology.

You will find this community at MediaAMP, plus open and private workspaces, socio-tech skills training, facilitated mentorship, events and networking. MediaAMP offers entrepreneurship and intrapreneurship education, ideation and prototyping options, design thinking workshops and more. Enhancing this initiative is The Cable Center's TECHStudios, a video, audio, virtual reality and 360-degree video production facility.

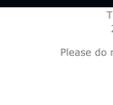

Whether you're local or a Denver visitor, learn more about their community! Contact them at info@mediaampfcc.com OR visit them at mediaampfcc.com to register for their newsletter.
