9:00 - 10:10 am PT 12:00 – 1:10 pm ET	Lessons from the Field: Making Partnerships Productive Online Live Session Robert Siegel  Join returning GSB faculty co-director, Robert Siegel, and Sabrina Ellis, Vice President of Product Management at Google, for an illuminating discussion of successful partnerships by examining a Google case study. This important conversation will explore whether Google should actively market its Android brand and the impact it may have on their business relationships. This case study will challenge you to weigh in on what is more important for Google's business model – pushing technological innovation via tight product integration or maintaining an "open platform." Preparation Questions: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Should Google actively market its Android brand? Why or why not? How might other parties react to Google marketing Android? 2. Which is more important for Google's business model—pushing technological innovation via tight product integration, or maintaining an "open platform"? Why? How should Lockheimer and his team manage this balance? 3. What should Lockheimer do about voice-controlled products in home environments? How should he interact with those parts of Google who build and sell those products? 4. How aggressively should Google integrate artificial intelligence into its Android products? Why? 5. Is digital health Google's responsibility? If yes, why? What should they do about it? If not, why not? 6. Who is Google's most dangerous competitor in the mobile space? Why? 7. Is Google's bundling Chrome and Search with Android OS for mobile OEMs anti-competitive? Why, or why not? Respond to Walker's defense of Google's actions, and take a clear side regarding the EU's ruling.

10:30 - 11:40 am PT 1:30 – 2:40 pm ET	Crisis Management at Zoom Video and the Heritage of a Classic / Not-So-Classic Silicon Valley New Venture Online Live Session George Foster  Join returning faculty co-director George Foster and Aparna Bawa, Zoom's Chief Operating Officer, for a session that will take you back to early 2020 when Zoom encountered an unprecedented and unplanned surge in site usage due to the increased number of remote workers brought on by the pandemic. That, coupled with its security breaches and Zoom-bombing, propelled Zoom management to respond swiftly and effectively during these trying times. The session will also delve into the heritage of Zoom executives from other companies, and how the Silicon Valley recruiting machine operates. Unlike many Silicon Valley companies, Zoom proclaims "bringing happiness to its customers and employees" as a key mission.

10:30 - 11:40 am PT 1:30 – 2:40 pm ET	Building Inclusive Organizational and Team Cultures Online Live Session Sarah Soule  Based on the compelling data, most leaders realize that they need to increase the diversity of their workforce, boards and management teams. To that end, some organizations have made successful strides toward achieving their diversity goals. Among those who have moved the needle on diversity, however, many are struggling to retain women and underrepresented minorities. That is, they are discovering that diversity efforts will continue to be an uphill battle if they are not able to build an inclusive culture of belonging. This session delves into how and why culture matters to diversity, equity, and inclusion goals, and covers proven ways to design a culture of belonging in your organization.
